What We Will Cover

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

WHAT HAPPENS TO OPTIONS IN THE MERGER?

HOW MANY OPTIONS WILL I GET IN THE "NEW" NAUTILUS?

EXAMPLE

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

NEXT STEPS

Glossary of Terms

- Stock Option: the right to buy a specific number of shares of company stock at a pre-set price for a pre-set period of time
- Shares: a share of stock is a unit of ownership in a company. Investors who hold shares of a company are known as shareholders
- Strike Price: the pre-set price that must be paid to exercise a stock option and buy the underlying share of stock
- Merger: the business combination between ARYA III and Nautilus, in which your options in Nautilus will become options to buy shares of "new" Nautilus, which will be a public company

What Happens to Options in the Merger?

- All vested options will automatically become vested options in "new" Nautilus
- All unvested options will automatically become unvested options in "new" Nautilus
- This automatic "rollover" of old options into new options generally is not taxable
- No changes to vesting schedules and expiration dates

How Many Options Will I Get in “New” Nautilus?

- Your old options will be rolled over into options in "new" Nautilus
- The math is similar to the math that governs the exchange of old Nautilus shares for "new" Nautilus shares in the merger
- Your "new" options are intended to approximate the same value that you have in your old options, calculated using the same ratio that applies to Nautilus shares
 - Some differences may result due to rounding
- That ratio will be approximately 3.6275 "new" Nautilus shares subject to the "new" Nautilus options for each old Nautilus share subject to your old Nautilus option, with any fractional share rounded down to the nearest whole share under each option award
- To approximate the same value as your old options, your old strike price per share will then be divided by approximately 3.6275, rounded up to the nearest whole cent. The result is the aggregate strike price of all your old options generally will approximate the aggregate strike price of all your "new" options
- While 3.6275 is approximate, the actual ratio is not expected to change much. It's based on the actual number of outstanding shares plus vested options on the closing date of the merger

Options Example - Strike Price $20.00

My Stock Options @ $[20.00?]	Old Options	Conversion	New Options (1)
Options	1000	x 3.6275	3,627
Strike Price	$20.00	÷ 3.6275	$5.52
Total Option Strike Price	$20,000		$20,021

(1) The number of shares subject to the new options will be rounded down to the nearest whole share, and the strike price will be rounded up to the nearest cent

Reminders

- Shares (including shares you buy when you exercise options) cannot be traded until the lockup period ends, which is 180 days after the merger closes
- We intend to adopt a public company insider trading policy in connection with the merger closing, which will include blackout periods, and any trade with respect to "new" Nautilus shares will be subject to that policy and any other applicable legal rules
- This is all still contingent upon the merger closing!

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Can I exercise my stock options now?

A: Yes, if you would like to do so, to the extent your stock options are vested. However, in order to exercise your options, you must pay the strike price in cash, plus any applicable tax withholdings (which will generally apply to non-qualified options).

Q: Will I have a tax obligation when my old options roll over into "new" Nautilus options?

A: The rollover generally will not be a taxable event.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: What vesting terms will apply to my "new" Nautilus options?

A: All vesting terms and conditions remain the same and your options will remain subject to the plan and award agreement under which the option was granted, but with the adjustments to the shares and strike price discussed earlier.

Q: Can I share this math with a financial or tax advisor?

A: Yes. If you have any questions with respect to the financial or tax implications of your "new" Nautilus options, please consult your financial or tax advisor.
